Executive Summary

From 1-4 September 2020, the City of Melton and the City of Wyndham co-led the inaugural Global Learning Festival (GLF) with over 20 other partners including the PASCAL Observatory and the Australian Learning Communities Network (ALCN) who helped bring this event to life. Our team was ecstatic to see many different countries and continents participated, in over 110 events including Turkey, U.K., Israel, Qatar, Taiwan, Colombia, Mexico, the United States and Australia, taking advantage of the many lifelong learning opportunities over the 4 days of the festival.

The snapshot of the Global Learning Festival includes:

- Over 110 Events registered from 12 countries including Qatar, UK, Mexico and Australia.
- Registrations to events came from various sectors including university, youth, disability, community development, local government, education, state government and libraries.
- Over 8500 people logged in and 'attended' different events, as well as viewing recordings.
- Over 250 presenters shared the floor across the four days to share their ideas on learning across all the events.
- While many events covered more than one target age group, the events were offered to the following age cohorts:
 - 3 - Babies (0-12 months)
 - 9 - Early Years (1 - 4 years)
 - 14 - Pre-School (4 - 6 years)
 - 26 - Primary School (6 - 12 years)
 - 40 - Secondary School (13 - 18 years)
 - 78 - Young Adult (19 - 25 years)
 - 98 - Adult (25 - 55 years)
 - 72 - Senior (55+)

Due to the nature of the Global Learning Festival and the current global climate, promotional activities were exclusively delivered through digital channels including social media, email and website. Promotional activities were targeted towards two different audiences, either potential event hosts or event participants. Messaging and collateral were tweaked to suit each.

Recommendations for any future festivals include continuing the above approach, however, with some adjustments to the website to accommodate a more automated experience both for event hosts and event participants.

The event encouraged people to learn something new as well as virtually meet new people from around the globe. The Festival also highlighted and relied upon many successful collaborations and partnerships across the world, ensuring a dynamic and successful event. Thank you to all involved!

Sally Edwards and Diane Tabbagh, MCC and WCC, September 2020.

Most Significant Change Story
CREATING HOPE BY GOING GLOBAL – FATMA’S STORY

Fatma Dodurka is a language specialist from Turkey and the coordinator of English at Tea Time Speaking Café in Hatay Learning City. Fatma first heard about the GLF from the Cork learning event in June 2020.

Fatma had been running Face-Face English-speaking classes in Turkey but the COVID-19 pandemic made her consider having an online platform where she could reach out to her students and other interested participants from around the world. The GLF presented her with this opportunity and she was excited to attend the planning meetings each fortnight because she felt that it would allow her to meet other event hosts to exchange information and ideas. Fatma mentioned that these fortnightly meetings and interactions with other hosts always brought in fresh energy to her own work and contributed significantly towards planning and marketing her own GLF events.

Initially, Fatma was hesitant to move her events online because she thought that no one would attend her sessions, but with encouragement and support from Jac and Diane from Wyndham City Council she persevered and ran some very successful sessions.

Fatma’s sessions at the GLF were well attended by participants from across the world and from different age groups. From this experience, she says:

‘I had dreams of going global because the pandemic pushed me to go online, I tell other people if they have an inspiration to do something, go for it! Share it with the networks you have, and you will get support. Sharing ideas with people is key’.

This dream of going global inspired her to name her sessions ‘Go Global All Around the World!’

The teenagers who attended the online GLF debate sessions were excited to meet their peers from France, Australia, UK, USA, Tunisia, and Algeria. They told Fatma it was like travelling around the globe and that this was a dream come true for them. Fatma shared how this boosted her confidence in running her events because she felt that the children and young people were in their own ways making unexpected connections and drawing benefits from the online forums.

Using a special open-ended encouraging questioning technique, Fatma was inspired by how the older children spoke freely about how it was challenging to learn a different language online during the pandemic and that there was a challenge of accessing and using technology. Fatma said:

‘As a teacher, I have observed that children are not used to learning new languages online, and when they have to do it online, they prefer learning it with others in the room. They need company and don’t want to learn by themselves’.

2020 Global Learning Festival

For Fatma, this highlighted the issue of equity in terms of access and use of technology and infrastructure. The overwhelming feedback from the participants in the online debating sessions was that there was a desire to have more of these sessions in the future. Even the migrants and refugee students attending the English-speaking classes showed interest and wanted to attend the upcoming sessions.

As a result of the GLF, Fatma now has weekly online debates with participants drawn from across the globe who share stories and experiences of language learning. She says:

“I want to do some more on a different platform. I love online activities and want to be active. My daughter and students were excited to be part of the global event, everyone wants to be part of the online debates, it is almost like a movement and they all want to be part of it!”

Fatma is excited to have established new partnerships, with notable ones being with WISE, Qatar and Wyndham Learning City. She concluded by saying:

‘This was a big opportunity to make new connections from across the world! I am now very busy preparing for webinars with other Learning Cities including Cork, Wyndham, UK, and Belfast.’

Project Objective

The 2020 GLF aimed to provide unity and connection to communities all over the world, and to give learners a firsthand experience of the benefits that lifelong learning can bring during uncertain times.

Project Scope

The project scope was for Wyndham and Melton Learning Cities to implement a Global Virtual Learning Festival, along with a range of other Learning Cities and organizations, for 1-4 September 2020. This event aimed to provide a variety of learning events, in a variety of languages, across time zones, providing some unity and connection at such a globally challenging time as we all faced the complexities of living through a pandemic. Each organisation/community was asked to contribute one free online event of their choosing for a maximum of one hour per event. This project was not to be a replication of the Wyndham Learning Festival or Melton Learning Festival (both set for November 2020) but rather a collaboration with other cities globally that had postponed their Festivals and learning events due to COVID-19 and were looking at options to be involved in a learning event.

Project Collaborations

The festival was led by Melton City Council and Wyndham City Council. A formal Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) was developed and signed off by both lead Councils to ensure a productive and supported formal partnership to drive this project lead role, and to allocate and divide key tasks. The co-leads met fortnightly during the two-month lead up to the GLF.

The core project team then engaged others through their existing networks as a part of the broader global working group, which had around 22 members from across the globe and diverse learning communities. This group met on the alternative fortnight to the core group meetings and was coordinated by Wyndham City Council.

The co-leads also reached out extensively to various partners and stakeholders across the globe to encourage attendance to the events across two months, and leveraged existing networks such as EcCoWell, UNESCO Institute for Lifelong Learning (UIL) and the PASCAL Observatory that highlighted this project in their marketing and allowed a strong reach to many others.

CONNECTIONS BEYOND THE GLF – HELLEN’S STORY

Hellen was engaged to work with the GLF co-lead team as part of a student placement initiative through her educational institution Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology (RMIT). Hellen was formally engaged a few days before the beginning of the GLF at the start of September 2020, supervised by the Australian Learning Communities Network. For Hellen, the most significant impact was how the GLF supported her mindset to shift from ‘how is the GLF going to work?’ to “when you set your mind to something, you can do it”. Hellen says that this experience made her realise that people all over the world thirst for knowledge, and that people want to learn, feel connected, and be ‘plugged in’ somewhere. As a direct result of her involvement and work in the GLF, Hellen was particularly excited to make a connection with Abraham, an event host from Kenya, who asked for support around the continuation of the indigenous community language. Hellen shared that she would pursue this connection beyond the GLF as it is something of great personal and professional interest to her. Commenting on the issue of digital divide, Hellen says that the GLF highlighted that the divide is real, particularly in lower income countries. For example, for Abraham in Kenya, Hellen saw he was not able to conduct his GLF event in the online format because he did not have access to infrastructure to be able to run it successfully.

Campaign Strategy and Objectives Review

Marketing channels

The GLF was marketed extensively through social media and existing co-lead contacts and networks. Additionally, broad searches of existing events being advertised as occurring during the same dates of the GLF (i.e. through Eventbrite and Facebook) were made and contacted directly to invite participation in the GLF.

Various Electronic Direct Mails (EDM’s) were also sent out through Mailchimp, to encourage people to sign up to run events, as well as to participate in the actual events. Posters were made using the three UNESCO communication languages for inclusion (French, Spanish and English) and shared broadly with all involved and their networks. The below report refers to specific marketing and communications undertaken by festival organisers and does not refer to promotion undertaken by individual event hosts unless explicitly noted.

Branding

The Global Learning Festival’s marketing campaign was managed by representatives of Melton City Council, with assistance from Wyndham City Council. Upon conception of the festival, Wyndham

2020 Global Learning Festival

developed and provided branding assets (logos) which formed the basis of all collateral including digital posters, website design social media branding developed in-house by Melton City Council

Website: <https://www.globallearningfestival.com/>

A representative from Melton City Council led the development of a simple website for the festival, completed through online development platform Wix.

The website served the purpose of providing a space for event hosts and participants alike to view information about the festival, about the organisers, to browse events, to subscribe to the festival mailing list, to navigate to the festival Facebook page among other uses.

Statistics

- 4572 visits to the website from 1 August – 1 October 2020
 - o 1,769 visits were on the festival dates (1-4 September 2020)
- 46.3% of users came from social media
 - o 89.12% from Facebook
 - o 7.11% from LinkedIn
 - o 3.57% from Twitter
- 44.1% of users came from direct referral
- The first day of the festival experienced the highest number of page views at 2,478
- There were 12,875 interactions to the website between 1 August 2020 and 1 October 2020.
- People spent an average of 2 minutes and 22 seconds on the website.
- Top website visits came from Australia, Taiwan, Colombia, Turkey and the United States of America.

Costs

The total cost of building the website came to $584.39 broken down into:

- $274.16 12 month Wix Plan for GLF website
- $15.36 12 month Domain registration for website
- $183.18 12 month EDM plan for website
- $111.69 12 month Gmail inbox for website

Social Media: <https://www.facebook.com/GlobalLearningFestival/>

2020 Global Learning Festival

The Global Learning festival Facebook page was launched in early August and was heavily utilised for both free and paid promotion of the festival. Posts published to the Facebook page focused heavily on education of the festival, why lifelong learning is important, etc. as well promotion of individual events.

Insights around social media promotion include:

- 1,281 Total number of page likes achieved
- 51 Total number of posts published
- 155 Total number of post shares
- 15 Total number of post comments
- 1,307 Total number of post likes
- 2,750 Average number of people reached per post
- 25-34 Most popular age range of page audience
- 42% Portion of audience that is female
- 57% Portion of audience that is male

Paid ads reigned supreme, far out weighing the reach organic posts achieved. This is attributed to the page being new with a small audience.

Top performing post

The below post performed the best during the promotional period. The post is paid.

2020 Global Learning Festival

The image shows a Facebook post from the 'Global Learning Festival' page, published by Melton Learning on August 25. The post text reads: 'FESTIVAL STARTS IN 7 DAYS! The first ever Global Learning festival starts on September 1! Participate in free, online learning events from around the world and experience firsthand the benefits that lifelong learning can bring to you, especially during uncertain times. Visit the website for the full program: <https://www.globallelearningfestival.com/>'. The post features a large image on the right with the text '7 DAYS TO GO!' and a logo for the 'global 2020 LEARNING FESTIVAL' (1-4 SEPTEMBER 2020). The logo includes a lightbulb icon and the names of sponsors: 'wyndhamcity', 'MELTON', and 'Melton Learning Festival'. Below the image, the website 'GLOBALLEARNINGFESTIVAL.COM' is listed, along with a 'Home | Globallelearningfest' link and a 'Learn More' button. A partial text snippet at the bottom reads 'During a globally challenging time, the Global Learning...'.

Costs

The total cost of GLF marketing via social media was $849.95

Website emails

The newly developed Wix website was utilised to send festival branded emails to those who signed up to the website mailing list. These emails focused mainly on promoting when the festival was starting and promotion of individual events. Insights include

- 5 Number of emails sent to website database
- 50% Average open rate (industry average is approx. 20%)
- 14.6% Average click through rate (industry average is approx. 2.5%)

Average open rates and click through rates are expected to drop in subsequent years due to the database increasing.

Emails to networks

2020 Global Learning Festival

Given the short time frame to put together the festival coupled with the extensive networks of the project working group, email communication to professional networks was heavily utilised. This proved crucial to the success of the event both in promotion and event numbers.

MARKETING FOR CHANGE – ALI'S STORY

Alison led the marketing and website design for the Global Learning Festival, as part of the co-lead team at Melton City Council. Alison says that to her, the most significant impact of being involved in leading and running the Global Learning Festival was that while it was such a challenging year, the team still managed to achieve so much in the GLF. It gave her a general feeling that we were all in this together. At the start of planning for the event, she was faced with complete fear not knowing what the project lead team were getting themselves into by proposing the GLF. Once she was working within the resources and partnership the group had developed, she became more optimistic and excited about what the GLF could achieve. She says that it was an intense experience, a crazy time, but she prefers to be busy than bored, so she thrived in that environment.

Community Engagement

The working group collectively reached out to over 500 individuals and groups through a broad variety of our contacts and networks to share the GLF poster, website and other links in the lead up to the festival.

Project Working Group – The Co-Lead Team

The following people formed the working group to bring together the GLF for 2020:

- Diane Tabbagh, Coordinator Learning Community, Libraries and Community Learning, Wyndham City Council
- Jac Torres-Gomez, Learning Community Officer, Libraries and Community Learning, Wyndham City Council
- Alison La Rose, Community Activation and Learning Marketing Officer, Melton City Council
- Cassandra Connelly, Lifelong Learning Projects Officer, Melton City Council
- Sally Edwards, Coordinator Community Activation and Learning, Melton City Council

BEYOND THE LOCAL COMMUNITY – CASSANDRA’S STORY

Cassandra was part of the co-lead team from Melton City Council. For her, the most significant impact of the GLF was doing something beyond her community. Due to COVID and not being able to travel herself to see people she loved as was personally planned, the GLF provided her an opportunity to learn from and connect to other cultures. She shared that she did not like doing things less than 100% to her best, so at times there was a lot of fear when events were just coming in based on lower standards than she had set in her own head. Cassandra spoke about how she learnt to do the best she could do, without trying to push situations in a way that were not in the spirit of collaboration. Building further on this idea, she said that she realised that one shouldn't put their own goals onto other people, and that it took some reflection to recognise that everyone was bringing their best to the table in leading the GLF.

Cassandra shared the realisation that most registered events were in English, and this made her question: 'is this really a global learning festival, or is it regional?' Cassandra said that she felt the co-leads have room to work on that in the future.

Budget

- Staff Time - all co-lead staff completed the work on this project as part of their existing roles in learning communities.
- Website $584.39
- GLF marketing via social media $849.95

Evaluation Framework

The GLF co-lead team took a comprehensive multifaceted approach to capturing the qualitative and quantitative impact of the GLF. The team used Most Significant Change Technique, the Collective Impact Assessment Tool (CIAT), surveys and Menti Metre to capture people's thoughts on their involvement in the GLF, and if, and in what ways, the GLF achieved its goal of creating hope and unity for those involved. Hellen Kibowen, an International Development Student at RMIT on placement with the ALCN and Wyndham City Council, interviewed various GLF participants and collected their stories using the Most Significant Change technique. Once all the stories were collected and collated, voting needed to occur to see which story showcased the most significant change. For this, the selection panel, which included members of the co-lead working group and several independent people, used blind voting to choose which story had the biggest impact based on the original goal of the GLF. Of the various MSC stories collected, Fatma's story, which is highlighted at the start of this report, received the most votes as the most significant change story reflective of the goals of the GLF. Specifically, it was noted by the judging panel that her story:

- ...encapsulated the importance of the festival and show the far reaching and diverse outcomes achieved by the festival
- ...highlights that the GLF goal of creating hope and unity was achieved for her.
- .... warms the heart. The global partnerships and the involvement of young people. The learning and workshops continue after the GLF.
- .... was layered in how their most significant changes involved multiple manifestations of partnership - across the globe, between different organizations, exploring different themes and how through the GLF new initiatives have borne fruit

Post Festival Evaluation Reflections Session

A targeted reflections session, led by Dr Robbie Guevara from RMIT and involving the core global partners involved in bringing together the event, occurred a month after the completion of the GLF on 23 October 2020. This interactive session included information on survey results, the CIAT partnership tool outcomes and an interactive Menti Metre session in which the meeting participants were asked various questions about their involvement and engagement. The following show the

CIAT

The Collective Impact Assessment Tool known as CIAT, was developed by the Community Learning Board at the City of Melton and is a free tool available to all organisations. CIAT rankings are based on decided project outcomes, their sustainability long term and partnerships – this is ranked via a number of methods including: surveys, event data, marketing analytics etc. Findings from this project demonstrate that the GLF partnership have had a moderate impact overall:

- Strategically we were able to use all tools available to engage the number of hosts and participants and it is highly sustainable in its current form but can be enhanced via partnerships engagement with the broader group in promotion of the festival.
- Level of participation indicates that sustainability of the project is quite high, but we could (and most likely would) improve on this with future festivals
- Results for the breadth of events is lower as expected due to the geographical diversity of events. We had little uptake in Asia and Africa and most events were held in English. Having more time to make these in-roads would lead to greater diversity.

Overall, the festival is sustainable and with more time to plan and deliver a higher level of impact on all outcomes would be likely.

Outcome	AverageProjectStrength (%)	Average Achievement & Sustainability Strength
Level of Participation	49.81	8.00
Breadth of Events	36.11	6.80
Strategic Planning	44.44	10.00

Project Feedback

Participant Feedback From Events

Each event holder was responsible for collecting surveys from their events, and this information was fed back as secondary data through event providers when they provided their feedback on how they felt their event ran.

2020 Global Learning Festival

Feedback from event providers post-event (survey)

This survey was completed by 38 event holders from across the globe. Responses are in the appendix section at the end of this document. Highlighted in this feedback was that the festival allowed for learning, partnerships and connections that would not have otherwise taken place.

Qualitative Event Provider Feedback from GLF

The chair of the Australian Learning Communities Network said: “Congratulations to the City of Melton and the City of Wyndham and partners for organising a fantastic Global Learning Festival. Over 100 events and some are still available online.”

From an event organiser from Turkey: “I am so happy that I have been part of this festival and started the debate events. Thank you all for the support and encouragement you gave me.”

From Hobson’s Bay Council: “Hi all, I’ve just filled out the survey but wanted to also send an email to congratulate you on the Festival. What you achieved in such a short space of time was remarkable. I hope your organisations realise what you have just pulled off with the amount of participants you pulled together from across the globe.”

For Derry Council: Hi All Just wanted to say congrats on a job well done. The website looked great and some of the events were just amazing. Looking forward to hearing how your own communities interacted with the online event. Job well done – a lot of work in a very short space of time..... So a well-earned rest now.

From a member of EcCoWell and PASCAL Observatory: I think Wyndham and Melton have started something special here and created a wonderfully international and unified effort.

2020 Reflections from the GLF Co-Lead Working Group

After the 2020 GLF, we identified the following opportunities for the future:

1. Start marketing six months beforehand to gauge interest.
2. Be clear about what a 'festival partner' means and what they need to contribute; consider a "partnership agreement".
3. Have themes for events linked to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).
4. Clearly define what a learning event is to be able to more easily approve submissions
5. Invest in a purpose built website for easier maintenance/inclusions of time zone widget and booking page, to offer a more seamless user experience for both hosts and participants where hosts are able to add and self-manage their events and for registrations able to be taken on the website rather than directing to an external website.
6. Start the project with a longer lead time, to enable hosts to properly plan events and collaborate. This includes locking in the dates for 2021 at the start of 2021.
7. Investigate the advantages and disadvantages of using multiple booking platforms with various registration options as per 2020, or alternatively a single booking platform with a consolidated registration process for all events
8. Offer the GLF advertising via other forms of social media beyond broader reach, social media promotion.
9. Ensure use of logo on Social media channels can be made available to place on participating organisations graphics/visuals.
10. Building on the networks created in 2020, create a targeted mailing list in Mailchimp of all partners who registered for the events and share the event highlights, as well as be a platform to send out important information dates like the next GLF dates.
11. For future festivals, have a pre-festival survey at the point the hosts are uploading their activities just before the event, to review pre and post surveys to enable us to see the change and impact of the festival on the event hosts.

2020 Global Learning Festival

12. Use CIAT as a partner ranking tool for future festivals to ensure all partners have a clear understanding of the tool.

13. With more planning time, further develop understanding on using inclusive strategies for events including raising awareness for event tools like subtitles and sign language (its only AUSLAN in Australia).

Overall, how would you rate the support of the organization of your event by the Festival Organizers?

How did you promote your event?

Tell us why you did or did not consider your event to be a success:

- We consider the event to be a success because there was great attendance and engagement from attendees- 100+ attendees engaged that were also interacting and asking meaningful questions via the chat feature allowed us to have a very meaningful discussion. There were no technical glitches and the logistics of the event ran smoothly. The discussion by the panellists was intriguing and useful.
- All events had people unknown to the host therefore this is a success.
- I consider the event successful, as the people who attended, were extremely happy about the content.
- Able to reach networks we had not reached before
- I had aimed that even if I had 2 people participate it would be a success, and I had 6 people .. so overall it was a success
- I think it was a success in the sense that a couple of young people expressed their enjoyment in being part of the event and one participant expressed interest in engaging to more similar events. Really enjoyed the concept of connecting with people from different parts of the world. However, I found that the event was also unsuccessful as it seemed unorganised and could have been targeted towards a more suitable age group given the topic of discussion.

2020 Global Learning Festival

Furthermore, I felt that the discussions didn't link in with the topic as effectively and seemed confusing at times.

- Both were a success. An opportunity to participate in a global festival and promote what we are doing. Also, a chance to share strategies to deal with a post-COVID world.
- The event was a success in the bringing together of global partners with a shared sense of purpose to promote lifelong learning in difficult times and to create a sense of connection across different countries across the world. The collaboration, sharing of experience and sharing of resources to make the festival happen has been a great experience and one we hope we can do again and make it an annual global learning festival?
- Great audience- fun performance opportunity
- It was, because of the marketing, thank you.
- Success More people could be attending if advertised earlier.
- We were very happy with our event both with the exposure it got and with the number of the participants
- Both events were a success because they were well attended, people engaged well in the chat, and the events were both well organised. The speakers for all felt supported and empowered to be involved. The post survey feedback so far has been great.
- It was a success as people attended, however, the audience was much smaller than those I usually attract
- The participants seemed to really enjoy it - I had great questions. It was a lot of fun. And I kept up correspondence with some of them after the event.
- Numbers that attended. Positive feedback. The smooth running of the event by Wyndham Learning Team (with a minor technical hitch)
- I consider that we had a very successful promotion on the global learning Festival online event in Taiwan.
- It was a huge success as we only advertised for 48 hours and got 40 registrations with very little detail on what the content was. I loved that registering to host an event was almost effortless which encouraged me to do it and I would do it again
- We had 30 registrations, however only 17 registrants attended. This event was considered successful.
- I have no attendance data to determine if it was a success or not!

2020 Global Learning Festival

- Including the event as part of the Global Learning Festival increased the reach outside of the City of Melton, which resulted in more people being able to access and benefit from the information.
- It was a great success; I would extend the time to allow for questions next time.
- I didn't really have the attendance that I hoped for, but I enjoyed teaching the small group some new skills, while we sat together creating something beautiful.
- It was a success because as a first to be done, it received great feedback
- My event was a success, with a great turnaround and a very high audience engagement and questions at the end.
- Good engagement of participants, interesting discussion
- Live event - success due to the quality of presenter and the positive comments and engagement from attendees. 65 registered to attend.
- We considered it to be a success
- We had 1900 people from across Australia and world either attend or later look online

What were the benefits to your organization/team in participating in the 2020 Global Learning Festival?

- Collaborating with Wyndham and other members of the working group. Additionally, WISE was able to broaden reach to Australian community groups/sectoral groups, with the support of the organizing committee.
- Exposure to new audiences and networking, sharing culture.
- Getting to connect with a larger community beyond our usual.
- Featuring in the global festival was a good opportunity to promote diverse programming facilitated by our library.
