Your guide to buying from and donating to your local op shops

Benefits of second hand clothing

1. Reduce your environmental impact

The fashion industry is responsible for 8% of all carbon emissions and 20% of global wastewater. Did you know 60% of clothing sold globally contains synthetic fabrics such as polyester, nylon and acrylic? These fibres are made from oil and leach microplastics into our waterways with every wash. When blended with organic fibres such as cotton they make the product difficult to recycle and impossible to biodegrade.

The average Australian buys 56 items of clothing each year, most of which are made from unsustainable, non-durable materials that eventually end up in landfill. Clothing waste has become one of the largest contributors to Australia's waste crisis, with more than 200,000 tonnes of clothing ending up in landfill every year.

2. Purchase items that will last

Fast fashion brands artificially shorten trend cycles, encouraging quick consumption and disposal. These items are produced with cheap fabrics, which tend to wear out quickly. Purchasing well-made second hand clothing from quality fabrics will last for much longer.

Donating to op shops

When deciding to donate clothing to your local op shop, first ask yourself, 'Is this good enough to give to a friend?'

- Find out what items your local op shop will accept
- Ensure your donations are in good, clean, saleable condition
- Donate your items during the stores opening hours

Tips for buying second hand

1 Be patient – give yourself plenty of time to search through clothing racks and explore bookshelves.

2 Be prepared – If you're shopping for furniture, bring a measuring tape and know the dimensions of the room you want to place the item.

3 Think outside the season – If you come across a great coat, but it's the middle of summer, buy it!

4 Visit often – Chances are you won't find that vintage chair or designer bag on your first visit. Visit often! You're more likely to find the piece you are looking for.

5 Always try it on – Most op shops do not allow returns, so make sure everything fits.

6 Reimagine items – It's not likely you'll stumble across exactly what you are looking for, so think about sanding back and painting furniture, altering clothing or adding cushions/accessories.

7 Look for quality – It's important to look for quality fabrics and well-made items as they will last for much longer.

Tips

Don't be put off by small defects

- especially if they are easy to fix
- Eg - replacing the sole or heel of a shoe.

Invest in a sewing machine.

A simple hem adjustment or taking in a garment is quick and easy with a sewing machine..
